Palm Springs Public Library

Palm Springs, CA

The Palm Springs Public Library was designed by the firm of William F. Cody, FAIA, and Associates. Frank J. Urrutia was the Project Manager for the project while working for Cody. This project was part of a city wide bond called Proposition "R" and was funded through this bond. The library was designed to capture the outside by opening up to interior courtyards. Clerestory glass around the main roof elements bring in natural light to the main space in the center. The exterior is designed with poured-in-place concrete to symbolize earth mounding and provides excellent sound insulation from adjacent traffic..
